What is Canine Acupressure?

Canine acupressure is a holistic therapy that focuses on stimulating specific points on your dog's body, known as acupoints. These acupoints are located along energy pathways called meridians, which correspond to different organs and systems in the body. By applying gentle pressure to these acupoints, you can release tension, promote relaxation, and stimulate the body's natural healing abilities.

Benefits of Canine Acupressure

Acupressure offers a wide range of therapeutic benefits for dogs, including:

- Relieves pain and discomfort associated with conditions such as arthritis, hip dysplasia, and muscle strains.
- Improves digestion, reduces nausea, and supports gut health.
- Boosts the immune system and promotes overall well-being.
- Reduces stress and anxiety, promoting relaxation and emotional balance.
- Supports respiratory function and relieves respiratory issues such as coughs and congestion.
